each individual a chance to wear what she liked.

What has been true is still true. Both straw and fabric are in fashion for headgear. Straw has the defect of fading and breaking, and it does not remain securely on the head in the breezes; therefore, any lightweight material like crepe de chines bound to have popularity. It is is bound to have popularity. It is preferred to feit, although the latter is more fashionable for the excellent reason that it is cool. The color is light brown, a shade from which we are not released by the approach of warm weather, although it is a warm color. The only touch of trimming, but it is quite costly enough, is the paradise that oozes through the suede of the crown. Trimming is no longer applied, you know; it emerges from a hole in the fabric. Sometimes it bores its way downward through a hole in the brim, again it leaps through a hole in the crown. It is always in the nature of a surprise.

He appreciates these things just as much as the respectable citizen—perhaps more, for they shine by contrast with the blackness of the sin that grips him.

He can't give up that sin. He loves it for the fleeting joys and profits it provides. But you're mistaken if you think he pretends to be good because he really likes what goodness brings. Well, don't be horrified. Why are YOU good?

The Hedge That Shields

More and more Americans are appreciating the value of privacy in their gardens. It is a same idea, this -that we plant lovely lawns and grow shrubs and trees not to form a ark for the admiring gaze of motorsts and neighbors, but to furnish us with a little kingdom of outdoors all our own, where we can live and breathe and have our being unbeolden and unmolested.

More Springtime Recipes.

In the spring, when our systems are calling for a tonic, we can do no better than turn to the garden's first offeringa, recipes for which follow:

Rhubarb Meringue Pudding.—Soak care and one half cups stale bread-crumbs in two cups sweet milk for twenty minutes, then add one table-speom melted butter one-half cups stale bread-crumbs in two cups sweet milk for twenty minutes, then add one table-speom melted butter one-half cups stale bread-crumbs in two cups sweet milk for twenty minutes, then add one table-speom melted butter one-half cups with a layer of the buttered and sweetened. Top with a layer of the buttered and sweetened crumbs, and buttered and sweetened crumbs, and buttered and sweetened crumbs, and buttered baking dish and been stated rind of one lemon. Turn this mixture into a buttered baking dish and both of the following liquor: Mash one pint of strawberries after hulling.
